EXPLANATION.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS is entirely vegetable, and contains no liquor, it is a compound of Finid Extracts. The tooth, Herbs, and Barks from which these extracts are made, are gathered in Germany, all the medical virtues are currected from them by a scientific chemist. These extracts are then forwarded to this country to be used expressly for the manufacture of this Billean. There is no alcoholic substance of any kind used. In compounding the Ritters, hence is free from all the objections includent to the use of a liquor preparation.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22, 1869. RETURN TO SPECIE PAYMENTS.

RETURN TO REGULE PAYMENTS.

The President has expressed himself quite definitely within a day or two to several of his financial friends, concerning the question of faxation and return to speele payments. He said that he had been represented as favoring a continuance of all the present rates of taxation, with the iden of enabling the Treasury to reduce the debt rapidly. He really believes, however, that the time has come for relieving the great agricultural and labor interests of tamp (axes now imposed, and to lightmany (axes now imposed, and to lightgreat agricultural and labor interests of many (axes now imposed, and to lighten the load upon other classes in many particulars. He thinks there can be a still further reduction in the public expenses, which will go a good ways toward offsetting the reduced receipts from laxes. In regard to resuming specie payments, the President said that while his desire to accomplish this had not been over-rated, he was free to say that the way to secure speedy resumption did not seem clear to him. He thought that it would be necessary to bring it about by such a plan as He thought that it would be necessary to bring it about by such a plan as would make the losses occasioned by it fall as easily as possible upon all class-ess. For the present he thinks a lesp to es. For the present he thinks a leap to specie payments with gold at twenty-five would be disastrous; but he is inclined to believe that if the Secretary of Tressury; is enabled to go on with his present rates of buying bonds and selling gold, that before a great time has passed gold will drop to from ten to ditteen, and if this should occur, it would soon be possible to resume without a great shock. AMERICANS IN DISTRESS.

The State Department has received information that three hundred Americans, who were induced to ship on board the steamer Lillian for Cuba, have been landed near Nassau, N. P., and the Lillian has been captured and held at Nassau on charges of having violated the neutrality laws. These persons are in a deedlute condition, and have applied to the American Consultor relief, but he feels that he has no authority of law to supply their wants, or these men one hundred have been sent to key West, and the Navy Department will dispatch another vessel for the remaining two hundred, providing they agree to not violate the neutrality laws again.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL The Legal Tender Decision and what

From the Providence Journal. The Commercial Advertiser informs us, that it is probable that the Suprem Court will decide against the constitu-tionality of the Legal Tender Act. Th reference to that fact. This being the sase, can courts, in the enforcement of these contracts, take this fact into the account, and declare that they may be discharged in currency, or the value in coin, at the time the contract was made? This question contract was made? This question may become of very great importance, for if the court should say, for instance, that a debt contracted when gold was at 280, could be discharged by the colu value of currency at that time, it would shrink the liabilities of debtors and the property of creditors marvellously. But it is not quite apparent to us how the court can reach this conclusion, for contracts to may money, are to pay in the lawful pay money, are to pay in the lawfu money of the country, and if treasur-notes are not then coin is the only law ful money. It may be that the contra must be construed to pay in coin, and that parele evidence is not admissible that parele evidence is not admissible to show that payment may be made in something that is not money, or to contradic or vary the written contract. The decision of the court in 'the Confederate money case' recently made, as reported by telegraph, was to the effect that a debt contracted in the insurrectionary district, though expressed in dollars, might be discharged by the payment of the value of the confederate dollar, in coin, at the time of the rate dollar, in coin, at the time of the contract. But this decision was based upon the fact that confederate money will be able to withstand the popular pressure, at its approaching session, for an increase of currency, unless this pressure be checked by a deciaion of the court, adverse to the Legal Tender act.' An adverse decision might produce inconveniences, but not so great inconvenience as most men anticipate. Such is the fruitfulness in resource of our people, and their capacity to adapt themselves to the mode of things, that they will not permit their enterprise to be arrested or any serious disasters to result to the business of the country, by any change which may take place result to the business of the country, by any change which may take place in the value of the circulating medium. The present banking currency is based upon values. The public faith and the ability of the country to pay its bonds ascure the holders of this currency from loss. Every man, the whole people, all the property of the country, are bound for the redemption of this currency. It is good, and will be paid, and the people will generally regard it to be good, whether the courts say that Treasury notes may or may not be made a legal tender.

Contracts to be made after such decision, or even now, to be performed heroatter, we suppose, might be made to be discharged in currency, and the exigencies of parties would, no doubt, ald much in adjusting all existing contracts. All would be under one con all much in adjusting all existing con-racts. All would be under one con-demnation, and a common interest would suggest for the embarrassment, which would otherwise arise, some so-lution that would avert or greatly mod-ify any evil consequences anticipated from the decision.
